

RAISING THE BAR

➔ Sure, bar carts are a place to stash booze, but they also serve as your home's party hub. With a little effort, you can curate a Pinterest-worthy setup that reflects your aesthetic and entertaining style. Sally Gotfredson, an interior-design manager for One Kings Lane (Sophia Bush is a fan), gives Us tips on nailing three different looks.

RUSTIC

A black-and-white photo and "smoky" handblown drinkware echo the pine and iron cart's "casual feel."

↑ Noir Bar Dolly, $1,189

Juliska Carine pitcher, $98

Kevin Russ, "Horse Couple," $189-$269

LUXE

Matching a golden frame with a gilded, mirrored cart creates a "glamorous and party-ready station."

➔ Dominkika Bar Cart, $315

➔ Juliska Amalia wine decanter, $155

Picasso, La Corrida (The Bull Ring), $599

BEACH

Shatterproof tumblers and a brightly colored print "set the tone for a lighthearted gathering."

➔ John Chillingworth, "Drinks Stall," $225-$299

↑ Vietri Drop short tumbler, $40

Anderson Teak Cobana Serving Trolley, $735

STOCK IT UP

Three bartenders serve up their warm-weather cocktail essentials for Us

CAMPARI

"Its bittersweet flavor profile marries well into simple cocktails, such as a negroni," says Mia Mastroianni, star of Bar Rescue.

TEQUILA

Natasha David, owner of NYC's Nitecap, doses her Patrón with Truly Spiked & Sparkling water to create a zippy highball.

APEROL

To amp up a classic Aperol spritz, Anna Wingfield, a bartender at Mother's Ruin in NYC, muddles in seasonal fruit.
